THE FEAR OF SNAKES.

Why Many Children and Some Grown Persons Dislike Them.

There are many authenticated instances of children becoming attached to snakes and making pets of them. The solution of a question of this kind is sometimes to be found in the child mind. My experience is that when young children see this creature in its strange appearance and manner of progression, so unlike those of other animals known to them, affect them with amazement and a sense of mystery and that they fear it just as they would fear any other strange thing. Monkeys are doubtless affected in much the same way, although in a state of nature, where they inhabit forests abounding with the larger constrictors and venomous tree snakes, it is highly probable that they also possess a traditional fear of the serpent form. It would be strange if they did not.

The experiment of presenting a caged monkey with a serpent carefully wrapped up in a newspaper and watching his behavior when he gray opens the parcel, expecting to find nothing more wonderful than the familiar sponge-cake or succulent banana—well, such an experiment has been recorded in half a hundred important scientific works, and out of respect to one's masters one ought to endeavor not to smile when reading it. A third view might be taken which would account for our feeling toward the serpent without either instinct or tradition. Extreme fear of all ophidians might simply result from a vague knowledge of the fact that some kinds are venomous, that, in some rare cases, death follows swiftly on their bite, and that, not being sufficiently intelligent to distinguish the noxious from the innocuous—at all events while under the domination of a sudden, violent emotion—we destroy them all alike, thus adopting Herod's rough and ready method of ridding his city of one inconvenient babe by a general slaughter of innocents.

It might be objected that in Europe, where animosity to the serpent is greatest, death from snake bite is hardly to be feared; that Fontana's 6,000 experiments with the viper, showing how small is the amount of venom possessed by this species, how rarely it has the power to destroy human life, have been before the world for a century. And although it must be admitted that Fontana's work is not in the hand of every peasant, the fact remains that death from snake bite is a rare thing in Europe, probably not more than one losing his life from this cause for every 230 who perish by hydrophobia, of all forms of death the most terrible. Yet while the sight of a snake excites in a majority of persons the most violent emotions, dogs are universal favorites, and we have them always with us and make pets of them in spite of the knowledge that they may at any time become rabid and inflict that unspeakably dreadful suffering and destruction on us.

This leads to the following question: Is it not at least probable that our excessive fear of the serpent, so unworthy of us as rational beings, and the cause of so much unnecessary cruelty, is in part at all events, a result of our superstitious fear of sudden death? For there exists, we know, an exceedingly widespread delusion that the bite of a venomous serpent must kill and kill quickly. Compared with such ophidian monarchs as the bushmaster, fer de lance, lamadry and the poluga, the viper of Europe—the poor viper of many experiments—and much (not too readable) literature—may be regarded as almost harmless—at all events not more harmful than the hornet. Nevertheless, in this cold, northern world, even his in the other worlds where nature elaborates more potent juices, the delusion prevails and may be taken into account here, although its origin cannot now be discussed. For my own part I am inclined to believe that we regard serpents with a destructive hatred purely and simply because we are

THE PACIFIC RAILROAD DEBTS.

Senator Frye of Maine has again introduced the bill on which he reported in the Fifty-first Congress to refund the indebtedness of the Pacific railroads. The new bill fixes the term within which the entire indebtedness of the roads to the government is to be discharged at one hundred years. The rate of interest is fixed at one per cent per annum for the first ten years and two per cent for the remaining time.

The bill is regarded as just to both the Union Pacific and Central Pacific companies, and is the result of a compromise. The bill first introduced provided for the payment of the indebtedness in fifty years. The Union Pacific was at first disposed to accede to this, but the Central Pacific insisted that it could not pay the interest and discharge the debt within fifty years.

As the debt is rapidly approaching maturity, it is believed that decisive action will be taken on the Frye bill at the regular session of Congress which commences in December next. The House Committee on Pacific Railroads has been discussing the matter in a general way and adjourned subject to the call of the chairman. A majority of the members are believed to be in favor of refunding the debt instead of foreclosing the government mortgage as proposed in the bill of Congressman Geary of California.

It is believed that an early settlement of the question would benefit Nevada. The railroad company is not disposed, while the matter is undecided, to exert itself in developing the country through which the road runs. There are hundreds of thousands of acres of land within the railroad limits in this state that might, by the expenditure of a few hundred thousand dollars, be reclaimed from the desert and made a perpetual source of traffic to the coast. No effort is now made by the company to bring those lands under cultivation, and intending settlers are discouraged from doing so by the high prices asked for the lands by the company.

If the debt is disposed of by a refunding bill, the company will naturally endeavor to develop the resources of the country through which the road runs, and if the mortgage is foreclosed the lands will revert to the government and become a part of the public domain. In either case, this State will be benefited, so that the sooner the matter is settled the better for the public.

FEDERAL MINING ASSESSMENTS.

Senator Wolcott of Colorado has introduced a bill to suspend for one year the effect of the act of Congress which requires the annual expenditure of $100 on all unpatented mining claims. The act has been in force since 1872 and no complaint has been made by prospectors and others owning mining locations against the provision requiring the annual expenditure.

These unpatented mining locations are almost universally owned by men of limited means, miners who work for wages a part of the time and expend their savings in developing the claims. This year in consequence of the general depression caused by the low price of silver many who have spent hundreds of dollars on their claims, are unable to make the annual expenditure required by law, and unless the clause of the mining act referred to is suspended it will work a great hardship. In Colorado the Denver Mining Exchange petitioned Congress in behalf of the miners to suspend the act and the Denver News says on the subject:

"Unless the act is suspended there are many who will forfeit their claims, many of which have had several hundred dollars' worth of work done on them. There are but few miners in any of the districts in the mountains, but have one or more claims on which more or less assessment work has been done. They work for wages during the busy season and use their earnings to develop their own properties. The closing down of the silver mines and the general cessation of work has thrown so many men out of employment and compelled them to seek labor elsewhere that grave injustice would be done to thousands of honest and hard working men if the relief proposed in this measure is not granted. As soon as the year expires all claims of this class will be jumpable if Senator Wolcott's bill is not passed.

"As there can be no possible objection to the measure, and as it is in the interest of justice, as well as of a large class of citizens in all the mining States and Territories, the News hopes to see it passed at an early day as possible."

The Superintendent of the Chattanooga Electric railway, suggests a scientific solution of the train robbery business. He proposes that a small dynamo be so placed in each express car that it would be impossible for a robber to touch the safe without receiving the deadly current.

The Denver News asks: "How can a man be a real silver miner and at the same time be a member of a political party which cast 90 per cent of its vote against silver coinage?" Crack that nut, gentlemen!

It is expected that the report of the tin plate made in the United States will show the production to be considerably short of the amount required by the McKinley Act to keep the duty in effect.

STEWART ON THE ALERT.

He Catches the Golden Napping and Presents Resolutions Adopted in Ohio.

WASHINGTON, September 26.—When the Senate met this morning the repeal men were caught napping by Stewart, who observed that there was no quorum, and questioned the propriety of the Senate proceedings. Harris of Tennessee, an ardent silver man, was presiding in the absence of the Vice President, who is attending a Democratic meeting in Pennsylvania. The President pro tem promptly ordered a roll call, although the Journal was not yet ready. Only 35 Senators responded, less than a quorum. A stay of proceedings was necessary until the members strolled in, one by one, to a sufficient number to constitute a quorum.

Stewart then presented resolutions adopted at a mass meeting held in Cleveland, Ohio, favoring an investigation to ascertain whether Senators were interested in national banks, railroads and other special interests favored or fostered by legislation, and expressed a hope that an investigation would be had and the rumor so prevalent set at rest that national bank stock had anything to do with the demonetization of silver.

Dubois of Iowa created a sensation by offering the following, which went over until to-morrow:

WHEREAS, There are silver sovereign States without the full representation in the Senate they are entitled to; be it resolved, That the consideration of legislation relating to Federal Election laws, tariffs and financial matters materially affecting the partially unrepresented States be postponed in the Senate until Monday, January 13, 1894, to enable the States of Washington, Montana and Wyoming to have the votes, influence and protection in the Senate guaranteed each sovereign State by the Constitution of the United States.

The resolution was laid on the table—Yeas 27, nays 19.

The Repeal bill was then taken up. Stewart, who was recognized, said he would yield to Dubois of Idaho, who had given notice of an intention to speak to-day.

Dubois yielded to Perkins, who said: We have been told in clear and courageous tones that all our existing economy troubles flow from a law that viciously operates upon affairs of finance and commerce; and we have been further told that the blotting out of the law will instantly recall to us the recent days of prosperity. It is absurd to say that our coined silver has caused, or is causing, the present lack of confidence. I am a sincere believer in the use and coinage of both gold and silver, and I do not think it wise state-manship to disparage either by the agency of a force bill.

If we commit this country to a gold standard alone we inevitably increase the burdens of the mass of our people, and unjustly enrich a select number or class of investors at the general expense. Repeal the Sherman Act purchasing clause and declare by legislative enactment the unflinching purpose of the United States to adjust and maintain its currency system upon the double standard, with equality between the two units of value and their multiples, and then open the mints to the coinage of silver of approved American production, giving our manufacturing and producing interests assurance that the tariff shall not be altered in disregard to their reasonable claims, or otherwise than with due regard to the greatest good to the greatest number, and your contemplated repeal of the objectionable clause of the Sherman Act, will have no force and meaning from Maine to California.

At the conclusion of Perkins' speech Stewart resumed the floor. He read from a paper an article on the President's alleged rebuke to the Senate.

Palmers, (Dem. of Ill.) asked whether it was consistent with the proper relations between the Senate and President to read in the Senate grave charges against the Executive for which he (Stewart) would not be responsible.

Stewart said it was consistent for him as a Senator to defend the Senate when the press said the President was rebuking the Senate and calling Senators criminals. "Let his friends deny that he has used patronage to control legislation," said Stewart. "Let them make it clear how the sentiment of Congress had been changed and how overwhelming the majority in favor of free coinage in Congress has been changed to a gold monometallist majority."

The Federal Elections Bill.

WASHINGTON, September 26.—The debate on the bill to repeal the Federal Elections law, was opened in the House by Tucker of Virginia, author of the bill. He pointed out that the right to vote was not given to the United States, but by the Constitutions of the States. He held that if the powers of Supervisors and Deputy Marshals permit them to perform acts not granted in the Constitution, then the law that creates them is unconstitutional. The States alone can make conditions of suffrage. That being the case the United States could not step in and make the conditions. It involved the power of the Federal Government to destroy suffrage in the States.

Tucker proceeded to pay his respects to John I. Davenport, whose atrocities, he said, were more infamous than those of the Duke of Alca. "Repeal these laws," said Tucker in conclusion, "and it will wipe away statutes that have caused clashing between the Federal Government and States for thirty years."

The accommodations are first-class, and taken as a whole the District Fair so far has been a decided success.

The case of Justice Linn vs. the county was on trial in the District Court yesterday. Clarke & Jones and T. V. These questions were submitted to the jury at 10 o'clock with directions to bring in a sealed verdict. The court then adjourned until 10 o'clock this morning.

THE WORLD'S FAIR.

Glances at the Great Exposition by a
Reno M. D.
CHICAGO, September 17, 1893.

ED. JOURNAL.—After leaving Reno for this point, we had an uneventful journey, with the exception of a grand treat by the elements at Ogden, Utah—a combination of storm and sunshine. On the eastern side of the depot the heavens were as black as night. The rain fell in torrents and the thunder and lightning were appalling. On the west not a cloud was to be seen, but there was one of the most beautiful and bright sunset scenes I ever witnessed.

We had a fine lot of traveling companions, but unfortunately did not get well acquainted until the last day out, but when we did we made that day one of pleasure and song.

Chicago is here yet, the same as of old, but there is more of it. It is longer, broader, higher and much more noisy than at my last visit. On my arrival I started at once to my brother's habitation, at the town of Hammond, Indiana, which is situated on the M. C. R. R., also the Monon, the Erie, the Pittsburg and the Nickel Plate roads, about twenty miles from the Palmer House and on the Indiana and Illinois State line, the southeastern limits of the great city joining the town.

I had to pass the grounds of the Exposition, or rather run through them, and could not resist the temptation to stop off awhile. On going into the grounds proper I found it was

CALIFORNIA DAY, and the managers of the California exhibit had advertised to distribute gratis untold quantities of fruits and wines. I wandered up toward the building, but could not get near it on account of the anxious crowd clamoring, pushing and elbowing their way to get some of the "sweets" of the great Pacific Coast. I did get near enough to see one large gentleman who had placed himself in position for the rush and who made it generally known that he was after a bottle of California wine if he lost his nether garments in getting it. He was about a 240-pounder, had on a new suit of clothes, the vest and trousers of which were a fair fit, but the coat was about four sizes too small, a square-cut sack, buttoned by one button at the neck, with the corners of the front flaps way back of his pants pockets, a new, broad-brim straw hat and a cane which he carried under his arm. When the rush came he disappeared, but after a long time he returned. He had his bottle of wine, holding it high in his right, and part of his cane in his left. The rim of his hat was torn from the crown nearly round and the rim was pulled down around his neck like an Elizabethan ruff; his collar and necktie were gone, the buttons were all off his vest, his pants were badly torn and there was not enough left of his coat to make a small patch. But he was happy in the possession of his wine. I was satisfied that was enough for a starter and continued my trip to my brother's for a much-needed rest and a general clean up. I rested Sunday and started out early Monday morning to "do."

THE EXPOSITION.

The first proposition was to get a reliable guide book, inquire prices, etc. I had an idea I would start with the "Pleasance," but heard a small boy say that "if you got as far as the Ferris wheel you turn around," and as I wanted to see the whole show I concluded to leave the wheel to wind up on before leaving for the west. I started in with the

MANUFACTURES AND LIBERAL ARTS BUILDING.

To which I gave two full days of careful examination, and found that I had only commenced.

This building is probably the largest ever built, and though the building proper only covers a space of 850 feet wide by 2,000 feet long, it furnishes floor room, including the galleries, of more than 45 acres. The height of the outside wall is 65 feet, the four corner pavilions 132 feet, height clear from floor 202 feet. The gallery floor is 50 feet wide and extends on all four sides of the building. The style of architecture is Corinthian. This great building was originally intended to accommodate all of the departments coming under the head of "Manufactures and Liberal Arts," but it was found inadequate on account of the great demand for space, so several departments of the liberal arts were removed to the Anthropological building.

In this great building, among the displays that are most imposing and instructive, as well as enlightening, are the German exhibits with the goblin tapestries and fine furniture; the English with its fine carvings of the tenth century, coats of mail, tapestries, life-size paintings of Queen Elizabeth and Mary Queen of Scots; the French section, with gobelins, bronzes and ceramic furniture; and the Italian exhibit with its statuary, paintings and carvings in wood is a dream of beauty, and shows great excellence. The Mexican display is unique—full of curios, magnificent marble and onyx carvings and slabs, potteries, ancient and modern, robes, shells, fabrics, weapons of warfare of every age. The Spanish, like the Italian, is a rich, instructive section and is one of the gems in this great building.

The firm of Grunwald of Russia make the finest display of furs and robes ever shown in the known world. The Siamese and Chinese exhibits abound in ivory, ebony, etc., crude and carved, as well as many curious musical instruments, etc. There are many and many exhibits from other nations. America is represented here in this building by the great firms of the country, and make a grand and magnificent display. Chemical and pharmaceutical products, druggists' supplies, all kinds of oils and paints, paper, blankbooks and stationery of all grades, inks, rulers, weights and all things pertaining thereto, letter presses of many models and workings, furniture in countless forms, mirrors, upholstery, ceramics, terra cottas, pottery, earthenware, stone, china, semi-porcelain, plain and colored tiling, marble, stone and metal monuments, gold and silverware in all its branches, silk culture, fabrics, etc.

However, one cannot in a lifetime give anything like a complete description of the wonders of this one hall, and after two days of it I turned my steps to other departments to get a rest.

A RUN THROUGH OTHER BUILDINGS. My next visit was to the Krupp Gun Works, where I saw specimens of the great gunmaker's work, among which were a propeller, 22 feet in diameter and the shaft, 48 inches in diameter, that whirled it through the waters of old ocean. Plates of armor, nickel steel 20 to 24 inches in thickness, which had been perforated by the conical steel-pointed shot from 10 to 14 inches in diameter; guns and gun carriages, and last the monster 120-ton gun, which Krupp will present to Chicago after the Fair is over. ("Big Betsy" is a baby in comparison to this gun.)

Then a run through the Convent of La Rabida, where many religious pictures belonging to the Pope are exhibited, as well as a great number of the relics of the Great Columbus. Then a quick run through the Leather building, which contains leather and leather goods from all countries as well as crude and manufactured rubber. After this the Forestry building, where all the woods of different countries are to be seen in their native rough state, and also polished. From this building I moved into

THE ANTHROPOLOGICAL BUILDING.

Where the display is queer and curious, embodying fossils from all the States; Indian instruments of warfare, in stone and flint, such as battle axes, tomahawks, arrow heads, spears, etc. Here are mounted specimens of all the American birds and animals from the earliest American history to date. There is a fine collection of Egyptian antiquities as well as the prehistoric footprints of Nevada; Ohio, Arizona, Colorado and New Mexico earthworks, mounds, etc., are reproduced, as well as the skeletons, implements and ornaments taken from the ruined cities of Mexico. Central America and South America furnish casks of sculptures, stones, hieroglyphics, human heads, etc. In the north end of the building upstairs the sciences of psychology, and neurology are well illustrated. An interesting part is two human figures, (male and female) modeled after measurements made from more than 25,000 American subjects. Mummified Indians and cave or cliff dwellers abound.

At the north end of this building is the camp of native Iroquois Indians, and for the first time in my life I have seen the "Beautiful Indian Princess" of Fenimore Cooper.

After all this sightseeing I wandered off after a lunch, after which I took a good, comfortable position to wait for the evening show, and to get rested after the really hard labor of the day. I could not help but notice that among all the countless thousands the cheerful and easy going disposition of all; no pushing, nor crowding, no impatience, nothing that tended to make things disagreeable.

THE COURT OF HONOR.

There must have been at least 100,000 people around the Court of Honor, waiting for the illumination and the Electric Fountain. At 7 P. M. the illumination began, and in a few minutes 400 lights and 12,000 incandescent lights made this "Court of Honor" a great and wonderful sight.

The "Court of Honor" is that particular part of the grounds bounded on the west by the Administration building and Columbus Fountain, on the east by the Grecian Colonnade or Peristyle, which is 500 feet long and surrounded with the great Columbus Quadrida and eighty-five allegorical figures of immense proportions.

BEAUTIFUL SIGHTS.

On the north side of the "Court of Honor" is the south end of the Manufactures and Arts building, and on the south side the Agricultural building. In this space is a large basin—part of the lagoon, which is 250x1,000 feet, in which are electric launches and gondolas, constantly on the go. The walls around this basin are studded with incandescent lights and in the center of the basin on a pedestal, stands the statue of the Republic. The figure is 65 feet in height and is the largest statue ever made in America. The figure is entirely covered with gold leaf. The hands and arms are up-raised towards the heavens. In her right she holds a large globe on which rests the great American eagle; the left hand grasps a liberty pole surmounted by a cap. On either side of the Columbia Fountain are the great electric fountains. These fountains cost about $50,000, and throw streams of water 150 feet high. There are several hundred jets in each fountain.

Highest of all in Leavening Power.—Latest U. S. Gov't Report.

Royal Baking Powder

After the general electric illumination, which is added much to in beauty and effect by some six or eight search lights of great power, being thrown on all the objects of interest and particularly on the statuary on the building surrounding the court, the lights suddenly disappear at 7:30 sharp and then commences the most marvelous of all displays—The great electric fountains play for half an hour, assuming all shapes forms and colors. It is one of the most magnificent of all exhibitions. After the electric fountains the lights appeared again and we wended our way to the Lake Front to see the fireworks which lasted two hours, and were fine.

This was followed by the bombardment of Fort McHenry and the ascension of a large balloon, which, when at a height of 6,000 feet, dropped "Old Glory" in colors of fire.

If this thing keeps growing, I will be ready to take a solemn bible oath that the old story of the Arabian Nights was true as Gospel.

A STRANGE GATHERING.

There is now and has been all week in session a curious convention. On Monday there assembled at the Art Palace in Chicago, for the first time in the history of the world, delegates to a religious convention of Christians, Jews, Mohammedans, Buddhists, Brahmans and believers in about every religious creed, in one grand assembly.

Time and again the great audience which packed the building, thundered forth its approval of the spirit of toleration and liberality which made possible the parliament of the religions of the world.

The dark-skinned sectarians of the Oriental countries in their white and yellow robes and turbans sat side by side with the dark-gowned and hatted prelates of the Greek church, and a red-cloaked and capped cardinal of the Church of Rome. Methodists, Presbyterians, Baptists, Campbellites, Unitarians, Episcopalians, etc., laid by their differences on baptism, eternal punishment, fore-ordination and the vicarious atonement and joined hands with the followers of Confucius, Mohammed, Buddha and those of every sect. Nor was woman forgotten. She was given such recognition as would have been impossible a few decades ago.

Cardinal Gibbons was ill and was not expected to be present, but he appeared and opened the meeting with an excellent impromptu address. He was followed by Mrs. Chapin and others. But as I do not expect to live long enough to see the establishment of a universal religion and think I will pull through this Columbia Exposition, I will go back to it.

SIGHT SEEING IS LABORIOUS.

When mind and body are called upon at one and the same time, the powers of endurance are severely tested. Every one who has visited the fair once or twice concludes to take frequent rests during the day. When brain tissue and muscle tissue are wasted together a condition of exhaustion follows, peculiar to the hard labor of sight-seeing. After five days spent in a few of the buildings to try and get an intelligent and comprehensive idea of the exhibits, I concluded to break the monotony and study subjects and wander around the outside of the buildings to see if I could find something to interest me without tiring.

THE CARAVELS.

The first objects of interest I struck were the caravels of Columbus. It is needless to say that these three ships of the 15th century were built and fitted out at the expense of the Spanish government.

They are stationed in the little stretch of water between the Convent of La Rabida and the Casino Hall. Had I never marveled at the daring of the world-finder, I would have been astonished when the thought came to me that in such crude craft the brave Genoese had crossed the broad Atlantic. I believe that if he had known the wideness of the sea and fully appreciated the full distance from eastern beach to western shore, some other hero would have the honor that now is his. Rude, cumbersome and top-heavy looking caravels are these. They were built in accordance with all the data regarding the original craft that could be obtained. The SANTA MARIA, the largest of the fleet, is open to inspection. At the water line she is 71 feet long, not quite 26 feet beam and the hold is 22 feet deep. The rear and forward ends of the hull are boarded over. At the forward end the bow and sides rise well up over a flooring on which her sailors had a little free space. At the rear of the cabin of the Admiral, over which a small deck hangs out back over the rudder, a regular poop deck.

When one looks at the narrow space where these 50 odd hardy men had been cooped up it is not any wonder that they made Columbus promise to "bust ship" if they did not sight land in three days more. One could fancy the weariness of such imprisonment, when recalling the fact that during the entire 69 days they did not even encounter a storm to break the monotony of their weary and cheerless voyage.

The caravel Santa Maria and consorts came to the World's Fair after having taken part in the ceremonies and festivities which were held at Palos on Aug. 3d and Oct. 12th, 1492. Built in Cadiz, keel laid April 21st, launched June 26th and on July 29th, went to sea bound to Palos to take part in the ceremony above mentioned.

Some ancient relics are displayed on her deck, some of the old-time bombards with small, stout iron hoops around the barrel are to be seen, and having near them the round stone shot with which they were loaded.

The sides of the vessel are hung with the arms of the soldiers and sailors—pikes, battle-axes, arquebuses, shields, bows and arrows. Before the pilot's wheel is a compass, which, a card informs me, was an exact reproduction of those drawn on the charts of Juan de la Costa, pilot of the original Santa Maria. Its face is very rudely drawn and loudly colored. In the center is a picture of the infant Jesus in his mother's arms, around which are printed the words "Maris Stella Misere Nobis" (Star of the sea pray for us.)

I have often noticed in the pilot houses of vessels on lake, river, gulf and sea decorations and pictures, but of an entirely different kind from this.

On the half-deck is the cabin of Columbus. A little room—in truth the only part of the caravel that is at all like a room. No one is allowed to enter, but on looking in I saw in the center a heavy table on which is an hour glass, an ancient chair, a clumsy inkstand, a white candlestick, an astrolabe and forestaff—instruments used in olden times for measuring the height of the stars. On one side of the room is an old cupboard, a wooden bedstead and the walls are hung with the arms of the officers. Four peculiarly shaped chairs are set about the room and some religious pictures adorn the walls. An octagonal lantern with ornamental iron work graces the railing that forms the rear guard of the deck. On either side of this on the top rail is a falconet—a small cannon—about two feet long. A crew of Spanish sailors man the caravel, and all as it was 400 years ago. The Pinta and Nina are lying close by but are not open for inspection.

These vessels were presented during the past week, amid a noisy demonstration of music, guns and speeches, to the United States by the government of Spain.

After this, just for curiosity, I stepped across to the Manufacturers' building and took a good look at Capt. Andrews and his 14-foot dory in which he crossed the Atlantic last year in 63 days, beating Christopher Columbus just six days.

"August Flower"

Perhaps you do not believe these statements concerning Green's August Flower. Well, we can't make you. We can't force conviction into your head or medicine into your throat. We don't want to. The money is yours, and the misery is yours; and until you are willing to believe, and spend the one for the relief of the other, they will stay so. John H. Foster, 1122 Brown Street, Philadelphia, says: "My wife is a little Scotch woman, thirty years of age and of a naturally delicate disposition. For five or six years past she has been suffering from Dyspepsia. She became so bad at last that she could not sit down to a meal but she had to vomit it as soon as she had eaten it. Two bottles of your August Flower have cured her, after many doctors failed. She can now eat anything, and enjoy it, and as for Dyspepsia, she does not know that she ever had it."

CLEVER SHOOTING.

RESULT OF TWO SHOTS LEARNED AFTER TWENTY-NINE YEARS.

An Incident in the Practice Work of a Southern Field Day—How Colonel Richardson Came to Know That He Had Done Some Damage to His Enemies.

When the Washington artillery was at Morgan City, there were many striking incidents that sprang out of the ceremony of dedicating Fort Star and of practicing with the solid shot. The whole day the war and its memories were kept before the people, but it was not a reawakening in which the bloody shirt had any play, but more of a thoughtful retrospection, in which the recalling of battles was not with bitterness, but with an impartial sadness.

Among the happenings of the day none were more singular and noteworthy than one which occurred to Colonel Richardson, the commander of the battalion. It was during the time when the batteries were firing shell at the two targets, which looked like tiny handkerchiefs on the water, they were so far away. A good shot was fired, and the spectators were applauding the excellent marksmanship, and the colonel stepped up to the gun to commend the gunner, when without cause or without knowing why the memory of a similar shot which had been fired 29 years ago almost to the very day flashed into his mind when he had stepped up to a gunner and complimented him in much the same style.

It was when he was at Fort Maloué on the siege of Petersburg, which was known as Fort "Damnation," when the shot 29 years before had been fired, and the Fourth of July was almost the anniversary of the very day. Instead of white targets for a mark it had been the tops of two Sibley tents which peeped over the ramparts of Fort "Hell," just opposite Fort "Damnation." They were the tents of the Federal officers. He knew that from a deserter who had informed him, also that the officers of the whole command held a daily consultation there, and that he could tell the time from the fact that they hitched their horses around the tents.

Colonel Richardson was then a captain in the Washington artillery, and he conceived the idea of scoring a point on the Federals by firing at the tents just at the time of the daily consultation. He selected the best gunner in his command and told him what he wanted him to do, and that was to load and prepare the guns for a special shot which he was going to direct them to make the ensuing day. The young captain was sure that he had gunners he could depend upon, and to make his triumph complete he asked General Maloué to be present when the shots were to be fired.

It was noon the next day when the horses of the Federal officers were seen collected around the two tents. The gunners were told to train their guns upon them and to be certain to make their shots tell. Those two shots were made the center of the interest of those in Fort "Damnation" for that day, for the word was passed around that the destruction of the officers' tents was to be attempted.

After a deal of preliminary arrangements the two shots were fired, and the tops of the two Sibley tents disappeared like cardhouses in a gale of wind. The success of the shots was the signal for cheering on the part of the Confederates. General Maloué complimented the accuracy of the artillerymen, and it was then that the captain stepped to the gunner and expressed his approbation in much the same way that he used to do to the one that had made the good shot at Morgan City. But there had always been a tinge of dissatisfaction about that shot at the Federal tents, and that was that he had never ascertained whether any one had been hurt in the tents, and for the 29 intervening years that one thought had pervaded the whole incident.

With these thoughts in his mind Colonel Richardson turned away from the gunner at Morgan City, and at that moment one of Morgan City's prominent citizens, Mr. Gray, stepped to the colonel's side and said:

"Isn't this Colonel Richardson?"

"Yes."

"Well, I have been wanting to meet you for many years, ever since I heard you had been in Fort 'Damnation' at the same time that I was in Fort 'Hell.'"

"Yes," said the colonel, "and when were you in Fort 'Hell'?"

"In July, 1861. In fact, just 29 years ago today," answered Mr. Gray.

"The colonel instantly thought of those two shots and wondered if his curiosity was to be satisfied. 'Do you remember a day while you were opposite me in Fort 'Hell' when the tents of the officers were taken down by two shots which were almost simultaneous?'"

"The stranger did not reply for a full minute. A shadow seemed to fall over him, his eyes grew dark, and he stopped back and surveyed the colonel from head to foot. Then he broke out feelingly: 'O—n your I shall never forget those shots. They swept away the flower of my corps. My first lieutenant was killed, and the leg of my second lieutenant was shot off, and five others were killed. And did you fire that shot?'"

"The deep feeling of the man was evident, but a moment later he said, 'Well, colonel, you are now teaching young soldiers to serve the flag for what many officers laid down their lives.'—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Too Far Off.

He had wandered about into dozens of stores hopelessly trying to match a piece of goods for his wife. At last he quit and leaned up against a post with the sample in his hand.

"What's the matter?" asked a passing friend. "Sick?"

"Yes, I guess I'll have to go to heaven," he replied, sticking the sample out aimlessly toward the inquirer.

"What do you mean?"

"Well, they say matches are made in heaven, and I guess they're right. I'll swear they're not made anywhere around here."—Detroit Free Press.

What a Young Man Did.
A college graduate had hardly received his diploma before he was compelled to face poverty and family disgrace. His father, who had been reputed to be wealthy, was an embezzler and a fugitive from justice. His mother and sisters were entirely dependent upon his modest earnings in a broker's office.

He had planned taking an advanced course of professional study in architecture. His ideal occupation had to be abandoned. He was in love with a charming girl, but ceased to visit her since marriage was out of the question. An opportunity for a year's travel in Europe at a friend's expense was given up.

Year after year he maintained a bit of bitter struggle to make a living at an congenial employment for his mother and sisters, to support his father abroad and to overcome prejudice caused by the family disgrace. He became a successful business man, but was perennially gray at 40. His life was haunted by the ghosts of his youthful hopes.

Such lives do not furnish material for exciting stories. They are dull and prosaic, but are nevertheless heroic. To give up all that is dear to youth and to be loyal to family obligations sometimes is a crowning triumph of unselfishness—Youth's Companion.

Many Ministers Present.

Ex-Secretary Lincoln, while United States minister to Ecuador, wishing to get into Westminster on the occasion of a special service there. Archdeacon Farrar had told Mr. Lincoln to go to the east door of the cathedral to avoid the crowd and to inform the usher that he was the American minister, so that he could be conducted at once to the archdeacon's pew. When Mr. Lincoln sent in his name and title, the usher came out and said, with surprise, "For gracious sake, how many American ministers are there?" It seems that several gentlemen of the cloth had each deftly made his way into the church by informing the usher that he was an American minister.—San Francisco Argonaut.

A Handle to His Name.

"I understand," said a pompous employer to one of his clerks, "that you are in the habit of speaking of me by my Christian name?"

"It is possible that I have done so, sir," answered the clerk humbly.

"In future you will use my surname," Mr. when alluding to me. I am 'George' only to my friends. Do not forget hereafter that I have a handle to my name."

"I will try to remember," said the clerk.

"I know we always say George Washington, Abraham Lincoln and Ben Palmer, but these are distinguished men, not everyday people, George—excuse me—Mr. Smythe," and the clerk retired to write out his resignation.—Detroit Free Press.

Pigeons Do Not Fly by Sight.
The numerous experiments made by balloonists have proved that pigeons are incapable of flying at any great height. Birds thrown out at 6,000 meters fell like dead, and even at the moderate height of 300 meters pigeons liberated by the balloonist Gaston Tissandier approached the earth in a spiral course. It is evident, hence, that they are not guided wholly by sight. To bring a point 300 miles distant within the range of vision it would be necessary to ascend nearly 30,000 meters. The carrier pigeon, starting on such a journey, must consequently start with faith in the unseen.—Philadelphia Press.

A group of women in China got hold of a fashion magazine from the United States. After examining it carefully for some moments one of the number said to a missionary who had been talking to them against "foot binding": "China women pinch foot. You say China women pinch foot. Melican woman not pinch foot. Melican woman pinch here," laying her hand on her waist. "Life here, I'm not in foot. Melican woman velly much more bad than China woman." What could the missionary say?—Louisville Recorder.

Five Years' Bank of England Paid Notes.
The stock of paid notes for five years in the Bank of England is about 77,745,000 in number, and they fill 13,400 boxes, which if placed side by side would reach 22 miles. If the notes were placed in a pile they would reach to a height of 5½ miles, or if placed end to end would form a ribbon 13,755 miles long. Their superficial areas rather less than that of Hyde park. Their original value was over £1,750,000,000 and their weight over 900 tons.—London Tit-Bits.

Followed Plenty of Advice.
A Connecticut farmer who wished to paint his barn asked all his neighbors what would be the best color. He accepted the advice of every one of them, and there never was a barn that showed as many colors as this one when the work was done.—New York Times

The Difference.
Two soldiers lay under their blankets looking up at the stars. "Gosh, Jack," "What made you go into the army, Tom?" "Well," replied Tom, "I had no wife and I loved war. Jack, I loved war. What made you go?" "Well," replied Jack, "I had a wife and I loved peace. Tom, so I went."—Chicago Tribune.

A Prominent Lady Arrested.
Much attention at a Washington ball by her remarkable appearance of health. The glow of health and the charm of beauty need not depart from so many women, when a certain remedy exists in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for their functional and organic diseases. It properly cures nausea, indigestion, bloating, weak back, nervous prostration, debility and sleeplessness. Strength is renewed, energy returns, and beauty again blooms. It is purely vegetable and perfectly harmless. Druggists have it.
